

One friend says something mean to tease and the other feels hurt.

Two friends want to play different games during recess.

A friend didn't invite you to their birthday party.

During a class project, one friend wants to decorate the poster one way, but another friend has a different idea.

Your best friend starts spending a lot of time with another friend, and you feel sad or left out.

A friend takes credit for an idea you came up with during class.

A friend says you can't sit next to them at lunch because they are saving the seat for someone else.